A NOTE FROM THE PROPRIETOR

Welcome, Esteemed Customer

Please browse responsibly. Or at least interestingly.

If you are reading this, then fate, questionable judgment, or interdimensional necessity has brought you to Trezzlepeg's Bazaar of Wonders - the finest establishment in this universe and several adjacent ones. Within these pages you will find relics, creatures, bottled emotions, impossible conveniences, rare records, and a few objects that I am absolutely not supposed to show you. Browse boldly, purchase wisely, and remember: if reality unravels, you probably used the item incorrectly.

- Cornelius C. Trezzlepeg, Shopkeeper

DEPARTMENT III

Essences

The invisible emotions living things release - collected, stored, calibrated, and sold by the dose.

Every living thing releases emotional essence. Proper technology can collect it, store it, and expose another living thing to a measured dose. Trezzlepeg maintains tanks labeled with emotions including love, hate, envy, fear, sorrow, joy, anxiety, peace, and anger.

STORAGE TIP

Pent-up anger and fear can grow more potent. Love kept unshared dwindles. Anxiety, pain and sorrow soften with time. Emotions are volatile stock - rotate inventory often.

DEPARTMENT IV

The Intergalactic Library

Millions of volumes - and a great deal that ordinary libraries forgot to preserve.

COLLECTION PHILOSOPHY

Trezzlepeg argues that a civilization cannot be understood through writing alone. His library preserves literature, music, art, entertainment, and even thought itself. The room is arranged around a huge globe of an unfamiliar world and shelves of hardbound works from countless planets.

LIBRARY FEATURE

Books of Remembrance

A book may be worth millions of words when it contains the memory itself.

MEMORY ARCHIVE

Record a Life. Revisit a Moment.

Special volumes can record thoughts and memories directly from a living brain. Press a hand to the page and focus on the desired event. Later, a reader can experience the stored memory as an immersive scene. Some books store a day; others hold weeks, months, years, music, art, or entertainment.

READER ADVISORY

Viewing a memory is not the same as changing the past. Customers who ask how to do the second thing will be directed to a significantly more expensive department.

Forbidden Antiquities

For qualified collectors, rulers, conquerors, temporal technicians, and fools.

MASTER LOCKET FILE

Gyemen Power Lockets

Ancient Gyemen lockets were created in opposing pairs. Different Bearers governed powers such as strength, wisdom, or the skies. The king and queen held the greatest pair: life and growth versus death and destruction. The system ended in war, and the Bearers themselves were eventually sealed inside the lockets.

NOT FOR SALE

SOUL-LEVEL RISK

BEARER WARNING

The lockets can consume their users. Continued use can create a Shadow from a prominent character trait and transfer more of the original person into that Shadow. Excessive dependence may ultimately leave nothing of the user.

A private riddle involving stars, dreams, a name, and the hunter's belt was used to remember the vault password.

KNOWN SECURITY FEATURES

PASSWORD PROTECTION

Trezzlepeg added a password after rare and dangerous artifacts were stolen from the vault.

THREE-GUESS LIMIT

After three incorrect password attempts, the security system detains the would-be intruder.

SHOPKEEPER ACCESS

Trezzlepeg can pass into the secured door by means not available to ordinary customers.

BOUNTY HUNTERS

The Shopkeeper has hired trained bounty hunters to retrieve stolen artifacts and troublesome Shadows.

TREZZLEPEG SAYS

"Rare and dangerous artifacts? Nonsense. That door contains routine inventory, tax records, and absolutely no devices capable of destabilizing the universe."
